

One day until the General Election 2019 – who will win?

Centre for Brexit Studies Researcher David Hearne has shared his expertise and views on the General Election, with just hours away from the end of the election campaign, and the possibility that anything could happen once voters head to the polling booths.

In a video shared today, David discussed how this election campaign has differed from previous elections, what we can expect from the turnout and what has been the most memorable moment from the campaign.

He also discusses the possibility of a hung parliament, if there is any chance of Boris Johnson or Jeremy Corbyn stepping down and what we can expect from the final result for the Tories, Labour and the Lib Dems.
